COAST DELEGATE SEES UNITY IN 18th MEETING

By RODERICK MALCOLM NEALE

The most outstanding impression which the eighteenth meeting of the Grand Chapter of Phi Rho Sigma made upon me was that, though made up of widely scattered chapters, the fraternity was indeed bound into a unit by ideals and objectives which attracted the same type of men, regardless of their location. To many of you, this may have been rather an obvious matter, but coming from a chapter on the Pacific Coast which has had no contact with any other chapter in any local affairs, and which this year for the first time sent a representative to the Biennial Convention, this situation was a pleasant surprise to me.

Receives Sincere Welcome

A few personal experiences may serve as examples of what I mean. I arrived in Minneapolis after midnight and as I rode to the Theta Tau House, I was somewhat dubious about the reception that would await an unknown visitor who had picked such an hour to announce his presence. My welcome was indeed a delightful revelation. No one burst forth demanding the pass word, grip or letter of identification; but I was met by two fellows who introduced themselves as brothers, and proceeded to make me feel as though I had arrived home.

I also discovered that the National Officers and Councillors who had only been represented by names printed on a letterhead before now, were gracious, warm-hearted men, interested in every one's problems and with whom it was a privilege to be associated.

Finds Real Bond of Friendship

It was also interesting to note that, after the first introductions were over, the delegates went about as old friends and the thirty-five men representing as many chapters could have lived together as members of the same chapter.

To the brothers in Phi Rho Sigma throughout the United States and Canada, I wish to take this opportunity to send greetings and best wishes from the brothers on the Pacific Coast and to say it was a pleasure to have met you and we'll be looking forward to seeing you again at the next Convention.

LYON SCORES SMALL TALK

"Fraternities are terrible time wasters. The temptations of idleness are multiplied by each loafer in the group, and every group has some loafers. The amount of small talk in chapter houses, if it had any weight at all, would sink the earth. So perhaps it is fortunate that it has no weight!

"But seriously the inability or dislike of American youth to engage in conversation on any other topics than sport and petting is one of the most challenging indictments of our society. I think the indictment is well founded. At least my contacts with English and German students have revealed a far wider interest and information concerning politics, economics, literature, art and international affairs than I have ever observed in our chapter houses or indeed among American young people generally.

"It is evident— to me, at least—that the fraternity system will never attain maximum usefulness as an educational agency until the general intellectual tone has been enormously widened and deepened."—President Lyon's Address of Welcome.

ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY AT BIENNIAL CONVENTION

DR. ELIAS POTTER LYON
Dean, University of Minnesota, Medical School

One of the country's foremost medical educators; his high ideals and enthusiasm for their realization together with a splendid spirit of good-fellowship have won for him love, admiration, and unqualified cooperation from both faculty and student body. —Convention Program.

CHAPTER DEVELOPMENT CONVENTION KEYNOTE

The 18th biennial meeting of the Grand Chapter of Phi Rho Sigma fraternity was held in Minneapolis, Minnesota, September 9–13, 1934. Theta Tau Chapter was the official host. The preface of the program expresses the sentiment of the meeting as follows:

"This meeting of the Grand Chapter of Phi Rho Sigma Fraternity is dedicated to the development of the Fraternity within, to the end that each chapter shall lead all organizations on its campus in character building, culture, scholarship, and in the development of a sense of professional responsibility; to a healthy expansion without, into new and broader fields of usefulness."

Dr. Lyon Greets Delegates

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, I, Dean, Northwestern University Medical School and President of Phi Rho Sigma, introduced Dr. Elias P. Lyon, Γ, Dean, University of Minnesota Medical School, and former president of Alpha Tau Omega, who, in his address of welcome said: "On the whole I am in favor of the fraternities, which is saying in a different way that weighed all round, the good versus the bad, they have a healthy influence on American education. Like the Ten Commandments, the Constitution of the United States and the New Deal, the fraternities have come out of human experience, and anything that comes out of human experience may be certified in advance as a mixture of good and evil." He gave out a word of caution to fraternities which show a tendency to become lavish clubs. He urged, also, that students devote more time to intellectual thinking and intelligent conservation rather than to trivial affairs. In regard to the financial side of fraternity life he spoke of "those perennial debacles due to carlessness in chapter finances." "Sometimes," he said, "this goes on to misappropriation and even embezzlement. Even such experience—and they are common—undermines chapter loyalty, prejudices the alumni (who usually get the grief of straightening out matters) and destroys confidence in the essential honesty of college men."

Theta Tau Demonstrates Initiation

Dr. Cutter gave The Objectives of Phi Rho Sigma" in his response. The meeting was then adjourned until the afternoon when Dr. Forman read his paper on "A Planned Chapter Administration." This paper was published in the September number of the JOURNAL. Dr. Elliot talked about "Cooperation With the Central Office." Following the presentation of these papers, the Alumni Relations, Budget, Manual, Nominations, Resolutions, and Ritual committees met.

Monday evening, Theta Tau Chapter initiated one candidate. Such an initiation is a tradition at each convention in order that the visiting delegates may observe the work and thereby assure uniformity of presentation. Following the initiation, President Cutter entertained the delegates and alumni with an address, "General Custer's Defeat on the Little Big Horn," illustrated by sketches and photographs, many of which were made by him on the battlefield.

Chapter Problems Are Discussed

Tuesday morning at the Round Table Discussion of Chapter Problems, Scholarship, Preceptorship, Fireside Talks, Lectureships, Memorial Lectureships, and Premedic Pledging were taken up. Several of these papers will be published in full in subsequent issues of the JOURNAL. In the afternoon, there was a general discussion of pledging problems. That evening a dance was held at White Bear Yacht Club and was attended by a large number of alumni with their wives and guests.

Wednesday morning a paper on chapter management was read by Dr. S. W. Donaldson, Z. It was specially prepared for those chapters maintaining houses. It emphasized the importance of cost accounting, a careful budget, and adequate supervision under the direction of an outside agency, preferably a bank. The interest in this paper was evidenced by the lengthy discussion and the number of questions, and further, by the subsequent visit of a group from a distant chapter to Ann Arbor for consultation with the co-author, Mr. Homer Heath, of the fraternity management department of the Ann Arbor Trust Company.

Manual To Be Revised

Wednesday afternoon was devoted to reports of committees, the most important of which was that of the Grand Chapter Committee on Jurisprudence and Legislation and which is summarized in another part of this issue. The Committee on Manual recommended that the Manual be entirely rewritten and revised. The Committee, consisting of John W. Carnwath, ΛΦ, Eugene C. Miller, ΑΛ, Edgar W. Meiser, P, and Richard W. Zollinger, Ω, was empowered to proceed with this work under supervision of Jonathan Forman, the author of the original edition of the Manual. Following the election of officers, the President-elect, Dean Lyon, made a few informal remarks bespeaking the cooperation of the delegates and their respective chapters.

Wednesday evening, at the Convention Dinner in St. Paul, at which Alfred W. Adson, I-ΛΦ, acted as toastmaster, Dave Wenstrand, A, made the address of the evening. His subject was "The First Twenty-Five Years." This paper is of such historic value that it will be published serially in the Journal. In his talk, "Progress in the South," Calhoun McDougall, XB, gave the historical background of those chapters of Chi Zeta Chi which amalgamated with Phi Rho Sigma in 1929. This paper also will appear in the Journal. Irving Cutter, I, reviewed the past decade, during most of which he was president of the fraternity. Lee Berry, Z, spoke in behalf of the Minneapolis alumni and Thomas W. Murrell, Υ, closed the formal program by an inspiring talk on "The Spirit of Phi Rho Sigma."

Mayo Foundation Is Visited

Thursday following the Convention all the delegates, visitors, and officers adjourned in a body to Rochester as the guests of Alfred Adson and the members of Phi Rho Sigma connected with the Mayo Foundation. The features of the Rochester visit were a clinic by Dr. Adson, a visit to the Experimental Farm, and a luncheon at the University Club at which Dr. Louis B. Wilson, director of the Foundation, made the principal speech. His remarks were so inspiring that they will be published elsewhere in this issue or in a subsequent issue.

For the quarter beginning October 1, the Chapter pledged eight men out of a class of thirty, five of the eight being honor men. Much of the credit for the successful rushing season goes to Joe Chisholm, Convention delegate who has been doing fine work in keeping the spirit of the Fraternity at a high level.

Thirty-three members of the University Medical Faculty are Phi Rho's—no other fraternity can boast of half this number of representatives.

The Chapter is expecting a visit from the New National President, Dr. Elias P. Lyon, about November 1, and another from Dr. Samuel W. Donaldson, Z, new Editor of the JOURNAL, later in the winter. Dean Lyon will attend the meeting of the American Association of Medical Colleges in Nashville, Tennessee, and Dr. Donaldson will visit Memphis on December 3, during the annual session of the Radiological Society of North America.

PI CHAPTER
Indiana University

The school year 1934–1935 promises to be very successful for Pi Chapter. It has an active group of twenty-two enthusiastic men, who have elected as officers: Tony Bryan, President; Phil Kurtz, Vice-President; Joe Haslinger, Treasurer; and Charles Maly, Secretary.

Each and every one of these men is working, diligently on the task assigned him, and with this spirit among the officers, it is felt that the entire chapter is going to move forward at a better pace than it has for many years.

The first regular meeting of the school year was held September 29. Every man in the active chapter was present. At this meeting the social activities of the year were decided upon and tentative dates arranged. The budget for the year was made out and a system of collection for dues and special assessments was arranged. The Chapter has arranged to have one business meeting each month. There is also to be one social meeting each month, these to be held at the homes of the various alumni members throughout the city. Plans have been made to have various speakers from among the alumni. Also, invitations will be extended to several prominent lawyers and business men with the hope of having some very good talks on non-medical subjects.

The alumni Chapter this year appears to be quite active and the members eager to cooperate with the active Chapter in all of its social functions. Three dances are planned for the year—one a spring formal alumni dinner dance; one dance for the pledges; and one inter-fraternity dance. The annual Founder's Day banquet has also been arranged.

On Tuesday, September 25, the men in the active Chapter in Indianapolis made a pilgrimage to Bloomington and pledged fourteen freshmen medical students. These are some of the finest boys entering the medical school this year; several of them are sons of Phi Rhos who graduated years ago. Since the trip to Bloomington, two additional men have been pledged, making the total number of pledges to date, sixteen. There is a possibility that three or four more good men will be pledged before the end of the year.

The pledges are: G. A. Powers, John McClellan, Robert Mashmeyer, Lyman Eaton, James Pierce, Thurston Harrison, James Orr, Gilbert Baird, Howard Romack, Wallace Dyer, Wm. Lybrook, Richard May, Morris E. Thomas, and Jed Pearson. On October 23, the annual Phi Rho Steak Roast was held at Williams Creek, in Indianapolis. The active members and alumni, numbering forty in all, turned out and had the time of their lives. Speech-making and singing were the order of the day. All agreed that the affair was a huge success.

MESSAGES

RETIRING PRESIDENT

The Minneapolis convention has come and gone. It was a really remarkable meeting and as forward-looking as any convention I have attended. The delegates were a highly intelligent and serious-minded lot of chaps and one could not but feel perfectly safe as to the future of the fraternity in their hands. The Minnesota chapter and alumni provided a surfeit of splendid entertainment.

Phi Rho Sigma can and should play an important part in the development of American medicine. As one attempts to look into the future, it seems obvious that the standing of the profession of medicine with the public depends not alone upon the skill and attainments of its members, but upon the high character of those who make up the profession. Medicine has no place for the dishonest individual or the cheater in any phase of personal or private life. Historically, medicine is an idealistic profession and it must not abandon ideals for personal mass preferment no matter how great the temptation.

Pleads for High Standard

In all this, Phi Rho Sigma can function as a powerful force demanding of its membership a high standard of personal conduct, of clear thinking, and with an objective that is quite different from the objectives of a trade. Let us continue in our membership real gentlemen; let us assist in inculcating the doctrine of service.

Under the leadership of Dean Lyon we all feel confident that the fraternity will become a stronger force than ever for the best interests of society. We must continue to be a profession imbued with the desire to increase the well-being and happiness of all the people.

Quotes Stevenson's Tribute

In his dedication to "Underwoods," Robert Louis Stevenson pays this tribute to the physician:

"There are men and classes of men that stand above the common herd: the soldier, the sailor, and the shepherd not infrequently; the artist rarely; rarelier still, the clergyman; the physician almost as a rule. He is the flower (such as it is) of our civilization; and when that stage of man is done with, and only remembered to be marvelled at in history, he will be thought to have shared as little as any in the defects of the period, and most notably exhibited the virtues of the race. Generosity he has, such as is possible to those who practise an art, never to those who drive a trade; discretion, testing by a hundred secrets; tact, tried in a thousand embarrassments; and what are more important, Heraclean cheerfulness and courage. So it is that he brings air and cheer into the sick-room, and often enough, though not so often as he wishes, brings healing."

RETIRING EDITOR

For fourteen years I have carried out the instructions of the Grand Chapter to produce a smaller JOURNAL which would be sent to every member more frequently than the magazine type of publication which had been presented up to that time—with what success you know better than I. Whatever success has attended the effort has been due to the work of the Central Office, the chapter secretaries, and such dependable associates as A. C. Morgan, Marshall Stewart, and the several men who got together the material for the various chapter numbers. My successor comes with a broader experience in journalism and will greatly improve the JOURNAL and make it more representative of our Fraternity. To him, I pledge my support and ask that each of you form the habit of sending him news items and clippings about Phi Rho's everywhere as well as any thoughts which you may have for the good of Phi Rho Sigma.

INCOMING PRESIDENT

If the members of Phi Rho Sigma find listed at the head of their officers a name which they have never heard, they must blame this anomaly on their delegates to the Minneapolis convention. From these delegates in turn may be expected as alibis the glory of Minnesota's autumn, the intoxicating quality of Minnehaha's waters, or the devastating beauty of Minnesota girls. For myself I can only say that it happened and that both the fraternity and I are "in for it" for a two-year period.

You had a great president in Dean Cutter. I expect to ride him pretty hard so you may contemplate that excellent entry as still on the track.

At the University of Chicago, President Harper used to say that the main function of faculty meetings was not to legislate or to do things for the University, but to educate themselves. I point out that the immediate problem of your President is to get educated in Phi Rho Sigma, and that one of the main functions of officers and members everywhere is to do the educating. I hope you will be severe taskmasters and close markers. The particular method must be chiefly that of correspondence, a method used widely now-a-days in the Extension Divisions of reputable universities. So send on your letters, pose your problems, offer criticisms, probe the intelligence of your pupil, and give him the benefit of your experience. If I can't make it go, I shall cancel the course or you can flunk me out.

In any case I thank you for permitting me to register in your school. I consider the Presidency of Phi Rho Sigma a great honor. I shall strive to deserve it.

INCOMING EDITOR

THE JOURNAL has been ably edited for the past fourteen years by Dr. Jonathan Forman who took it over when it assumed the present tabloid form. A recent survey of the members of the Grand Council expresses the opinion that it is their wish to see it continued in this form rather than that of a quarterly.

Heretofore, THE JOURNAL has not carried advertising in any form and for that reason has been an expensive project. In an effort to increase the size of the publication and devote more space to news and chapter problems it has been decided that well selected advertising will be accepted. Contacts have been made with agencies for this purpose and, although we have not yet sold any space, we hope to do so in the future. If some coming issue appears with an advertisement of your favorite cigarette, just consider it a profit-sharing venture and good judgment on the part of the firm to place the name of its product before several thousand physicians and students.

My one plea in taking over this office is directed to students and alumni alike. GIVE US NEWS. We want you to feel that this is your paper and that you can do your part in making it bigger and better by sending us interesting facts about Phi Rhos. Chapter secretaries should make it a point to see that all items of interest about their members, active and alumni, are recorded and sent to us in time for the next issue. We desire very much to satisfy numerous requests, and to enlarge our Alumni News but this cannot be done successfully without your aid. You who have been backward or negligent about sending copy may now redeem yourselves by coming to our assistance.

Our only hope is that we may be able to maintain the standard of this publication as set by our predecessor.

TENNESSEE GETS HOUSE FUND

Under the direction of Dr. Marshall Stewart, AA, past president, a house fund has been organized at the University of Tennessee under the joint trusteeship of Dr. R. Eustace Semmes and Dr. James B. Stanford, both of Chi Epsilon Chapter. Almost one thousand dollars has been subscribed, a goodly part of it paid in cash.

ODDS AND ENDS

HOUSE FINANCES REGULATED

The Board of Regents of the University of Michigan has ruled that, beginning with the fall of 1935, no fraternity or sorority may open "if, on July 1 of any year, its unpaid accounts receivable from members active at any time during the college year just ended exceed a total of $200, or its unpaid accounts payable for the immediately preceding year exceed $500."

In addition, the Regents' ruling says, each house must have appointed, by November 1, 1934, an Alumni Financial Adviser who shall see that the fraternity or sorority submits to the Dean of Students or to the Dean of Women "an operating budget for his fraternity at the beginning of each semester based on the number of students then in residence in the house" and "an acceptable audit of the chapter accounts at the close of each school year." Each fraternity is required to submit a financial statement and balance sheet each month. Sororities are subject to the latter requirement at the pleasure of the Dean of Women.

FRATERNITY BINDS BULLETINS

The Fraternity Month for October, 1934 informs its readers of a new type of fraternity publication, saying: "Unique in publishing circles is the publication program of Nu Sigma Nu. The national fraternity publishes an annual chapter letter which is sent to every active. In this pamphlet is included 12 pages of national fraternity material. After the individual chapter bulletins have been prepared the entire type setup is reprinted and bound into book form. Three copies of the cloth-bound volume are furnished each chapter. Officers and others also receive copies. For the current year a volume of 420 pages is necessary. The editor of this tremendous task is able Dr. Stuart Graves, secretary-treasurer of the fraternity and dean of the University of Alabama Medical College at Tuscaloosa."

FATHER HELPS PLEDGE SON

A novel ceremony took place at Rho Chapter on the evening of September 24 when Dr. Bascomb Lanier Chipley put a pledge pin on his son, Ehrlich, who is beginning his course at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. Dr. Chipley was the first man initiated into Chi Zeta Chi by its Alpha Chapter (now Chi Alpha Chapter of Phi Rho Sigma), at the University of Georgia. He is now located in Patterson, New Jersey.

DELEGATES TOLD HOW TO RAISE SCHOLARSHIP

In the Round Table Discussion of Chapter Problems which took place at Tuesday morning session of the Grand Chapter Meeting, the following paper on "Scholarship" was presented by Homer P. Howell, A:

"Probably no fraternity ever holds a meeting of any description, local or national, at which the subject of scholarship does not come up for discussion in some shape or form, and after all, scholarship is undoubtedly one of the paramount reasons for the existence of fraternities through times when the older generations are urging us to dispense with all the unnecessary "frills."

The man with the highest scholastic standing in school does not necessarily make the biggest success in life, but the man who has associated with, and held himself up to, the standard of a group who are mentally keen and active, is far more ably equipped to make a success of himself than the man who has drifted into mentally careless habits.

Choice of Roommate Important

Before throwing the topic open to discussion, I would like to tell you about some of the methods which Alpha chapter employs in keeping up its scholastic standing, and to bring to you a few ideas which I have, that might be put into practice in any chapter.

We always advise our Freshmen to be very careful in their choice of roommate and laboratory partner, and as we recommend that both these places be filled by the same individual, it follows that this choice is one of the most important to be made during a man's school life. It is a great deal better not to live with some one with whom you are too well acquainted. Adjustments are always necessary and it is easier and more pleasant to make them with a stranger than with a friend. It is also much better for two men who are nearly equal in mental, financial, and social status to be closely associated. A peculiar psychological situation sometimes arises when such is not the case, and a good man often develops an inferiority complex which may become a definite handicap, if he rooms with some one who feels superior to him.

Sponsor Records Grades

Alpha chapter usually has a member of A.O.A. as sponsor for its Freshmen. Naturally he is a man of high caliber to whom mental alertness is a virtue and he is willing and eager to share his practical knowledge of courses and professors and the like, with any one who is anxious to apply himself. One of his duties is the compiling of a weekly record chart of the Freshmen grades. This chart is always kept up to date and it is possible to tell at a glance where each man stands.

Microscopic practicals have proved to be a pitfall for many a Freshman and to help overcome this we have set up a system of microscopes and slides whereby we duplicate as nearly as possible the system used by the university. In this way the men are able to overcome the handicap of quick diagnosis before they actually come in contact with it in an examination.

Urges Sympathy for Freshmen

All the men in the house, whether it may be their delegated duty or not, contribute in many small ways to the upholding of the scholastic record of the chapter. Setting all jokes aside, Freshmen actually do have troubles and problems, and a sympathetic attitude towards these goes a long way towards creating a congenial atmosphere which is highly conducive to efficient work. Quiet hours are a great help and can be maintained with little effort. Every member contributes to the file of notebooks and exam questions which is a permanent feature with us.

Alpha chapter believes in promoting outside activities for Freshmen, for we believe that a mind relaxed through pleasant association with other minds does its best work. We place intramural sports at the head of the list of beneficial activities, and practically insist that every Freshman who is able, take some part in such sports. Intramural sports give one a feeling of group loyalty and at the same time broaden his horizon to a great extent, and keep him from becoming narrow in his interests.

All these things are what we do for the upholding of the scholarship of the Freshman student. It seems to me that we fall a little short in our efforts for helping the upper classman. The only facilities we have on hand at the present time are the files of examination and state board questions, and the library, and a certain feeling of respect which we have cultivated for the student who ranks high in his class.

Proposes New Rooming System

I have in mind a few points which might be put into practice to further the raising of our scholarship standards as a group. I have said that we have Freshmen rooming together. Would it not be better for a Freshman to room with an upper classman? This, of course, would involve a great many more difficulties in efficient selection of personalities, but with proper care I believe that it could be done. An upper classman could be a great help to a Freshman and a Freshman could be a great stimulus to an upper classman. Of course it might be that such an arrangement would work out only in ideal cases, but it might be worth a trial.

The supervised study table where absolute quiet was maintained, with one or two of the highest ranking Seniors in the house in charge to answer questions could be worked out with little difficulty in most houses and might possibly become an active factor in practical assistance to lower classmen.

Suggests Tutoring by Seniors

I told you of the chart of Freshmen grades which we keep on record. It might be a good thing to set aside certain hours for tutoring by Seniors and insist that every Freshman whose grades were below a certain standard must take advantage of these hours.

I believe that every chapter should make some sort of public acknowledgment of its respect for its members who distinguish themselves scholastically, and it seems to me that some permanent record of the highest ranking member of each year's class should be in evidence in the house. This might take the form of a tablet to be given a place of honor in the hall or living room.

GENERAL PRACTITIONERS NEEDED, LYON BELIEVES

The Commercial Appeal, a Memphis, Tennessee daily, printed the following editorial under the title "General Practitioners" in connection with the recent Memphis visit of President Elias P. Lyon, in an early November number:

"Dr. E. P. Lyon, dean of the University of Minnesota medical school, gave a Commercial Appeal reporter a terse and interesting statement to the effect that general practitioners are needed. The rank and file of the general public probably agree with Dr. Lyon wholeheartedly, and it is to be believed that his position is steadily being taken by the real leaders in American medicine. It certainly does not imply any criticism of the genuine specialist, either, nor any denial of the need for men who are trained to the nth degree in handling certain types of human ailments. It amounts to a sort of confession, perhaps, that medical schools, physicians themselves, and the general public have all co-operated in one way or another to produce a state of affairs that is improperly balanced.

Need Intelligent Discussion

"The question Dr. Lyon raises is one that needs to be considered somewhat more fully and equably than it has been to date. It has been and is being debated, more frequently than otherwise, perhaps, with a good deal more heat and acrimony than is useful and helpful. That applies to the people who call doctors as well as to the doctors themselves. The case should be argued out on its merits and without prejudice, for the trend practice is to take is a matter of potential concern to all of us and of actual concern to many of us. It certainly means a great deal to the doctors, for they have to make a living. It would be well if the public could understand, for instance, that most American doctors do not make huge fortunes by some sort of magic, but that they do work more or less hard for a living. The doctors already know that a great many individuals are not so placed economically that they can pay present rates for the medical service they need and would like to have.

Adjustment Can Be Made

"To make absolutely definite suggestions in a matter of this sort is more than any except a very foolhardy newspaper man would do. Various interesting and valuable experiments in the direction of health insurance are being tried. In Canada in certain provinces districts club together to pay an adequately equipped physician. There are those who advocate so-called state medicine and those who all but foam at the mouth at the mention of the term. What can be said, however, is that the present setup for medical service is clearly not what it should be, and that the medical profession and the people they serve own intelligence. On that basis an adjustment can be and will be worked out."

BROAD TRAINING URGED BY MEDICAL EDUCATOR

The following excerpts from the Response Address delivered at the Convention by former Grand President Irving S. Cutter, I, contain the substance of Dean Cutter's discussion of what he termed "a new order":

"In the first place, physicians are facing a new order. I am not for social medicine. I do not believe it will ever come in America. Social medicine in England is not a success. It may be a success in some few European countries that are under more or less socialistic domination. I think after all, the American citizen is so much of an individualist that fundamentally he will want his own doctor and he will not wish to have any state, any county, any government organization whatsoever to tell him where to go for medical service.

Awareness of Trends Essential

"But if we are not to have state medicine, it behooves medical men to be alert to the signs of the times. I cannot agree in but very few particulars with the so-called majority report of the Committee on the Cost of Medical Care that Dr. Lyon mentioned, because the data gathered was entirely too insufficient upon which to base any conclusions. And while the minority report, written by physicians pretty largely, may have been a specious argument of physicians for physicians and by physicians; nevertheless, it contains the germ of the thinking that I think is going throughout this entire country. Namely, that social organizations, social domination of this or that or the other, must be tempered and graded very carefully in its application. In other words, the applications of the so-called social order are very, very small in an independent nation. The people themselves are sufficiently independent not to be willing to submerge their own thinking to that of any plan or propaganda.

Physicians Too Narrow, He Says

"In order to get ready for this sort of thing the physician has got to be a bigger and a broader man. Dr. Lyon has very well mentioned the fact that physicians are entirely too narrow and that really is my thesis. We have felt that a man who was skilled in medicine—perhaps that was the sum total, the summum bonum, of what he intended and desired to achieve.

"Fundamentally that is all wrong. There never was such a time, and the future is bound to hold forth for physicians a demand upon them of character, of quality, of education, and of culture that has never been required of them before. And so we have got to look to the trend and the stimulus we are giving to medical education."

Suggests Medicine Is No Trade

"If we think for one minute that the physician of the future is simply going to be a highly trained technical man, then we frankly and fearlessly admit that social medicine will probably be the order of the day. If he is to be trained exactly like a mechanic, if he is to be trained in only the technical things that have to do with diagnosis and treatment of disease, then we frankly and fearlessly admit that medicine is a trade, and we had better all join the union and follow the ranks of the American Federation of Labor.

"I do not say that is not coming. I do not believe it will ever come. But I think it is up to us to make certain plans and definite moves that will absolutely and forever forestall its coming in this country.

Proposes Broader Education

"What have we got to do, then? We have got to broaden out our whole field of education. We have got to make certain in the first place that no man shall ever get into medicine, or at any rate, ever get out of medicine, who is not fundamentally honest. About all a dishonest lawyer can do is steal your money, but a dishonest doctor may steal some person's life." . . .

"If the profession of medicine is socialized it is our fault. If we haven't within the ranks of American medicine men who are big enough, men who are keen enough, men far-sighted enough to build backfires against the thing that is derogatory to the best interests (and that is what I sincerely and honestly feel social medicine would be —derogatory to the best interests of the public) of medicine, if we cannot unselfishly say that medicine is something which we can devote our whole-hearted efforts toward, with the ideal of serving best, then we have got to start the germ of this thing in some such organization as Phi Rho Sigma."
